My name is Carmen Garcia and I'm a student at King's School, which is a language school in Glasgow. I'm Spanish, I am from Madrid, but my mother is French. She's a teacher in Madrid. The students at King's School are from many different countries. I'm in a class which has students from Japan, Mexico, Germany, and Italy. It's really interesting to meet so many different people. The director of the school is British, but my teacher is American. She's from New York and her name's Helen. She's very nice and she's an excellent teacher. Her classes are always great fun. Jose and Karl are probably my best friends in the class. Jose is from Mexico and Karl is from Berlin, Germany. We always speak English together because that's the best way to learn.

- Maria, where do you work?
- I work in a big shopping centre in Madrid. I am a telephonist.
- What do you do?
- My work place is a cubicle. It's very small. There is a chair, a computer and a telephone.
- It sounds very nice.
- No, it isn't. Anyway, basically I answer calls all day. I get calls from customers, but also, I have calls from suppliers about orders and deliveries.
- And do you like your job?
- Not really. The worst thing is that people think that I'm responsible for everything.
- What do people say?
- It's horrible! They are always complaining about things and shouting at me. It's awful! Of course, I can't hang up.
- Is it really hard?
- Yes. I suffer from stress. I really hate phone at home. It makes me jump sometimes. I want to disconnect it but my husband needs it for work.
- What are you going to do?
- I really don't know. I smoke too much. I can't sleep. And it's all because of phone.

Well, I speak Spanish quite well. So, before I go to university I'm going to travel around South America. I've got an old school friend in Brazil and a pen friend in Guatemala. So, I have some people to visit. I also want to go and see the rain forest. I am working in the local restaurant at the moment. But as soon as I have enough money, I'll book a flight to Rio de Janeiro. I'll spend about a month in Brazil. Then go on to Guatemala, I think. I'm so looking forward to go. It'll be fantastic. When I'm travelling around, I'll phone home twice a week. If I don't keep in touch, I know my parents will worry.

Robin Knight the television reporter, is interviewing the Duchess of Wessex for the programme «The English At Home».

Robin. — Now, Duchess ... tell us about an ordinary day in your life.

Duchess. — Well, I wake up at seven o'clock...

Robin. — Really? Do you get up then?

Duchess. — No, of course I don't get up at that time. I have breakfast in bed and I read «The Times».

Robin. — What time do you get up?

Duchess. — I get up at ten.

Robin. — What do you do then?

Duchess. — I read my letters and dictate the replies to my secretary.

Robin. - ... and then.

Duchess. — At eleven I walk in the garden with Philip.

Robin. — Oh? Who's Philip?

Duchess. — Philips my dog.

Robin. — What time do you have lunch?

Duchess. — I have lunch at twelve thirty.

Robin. — And after lunch?

Duchess. — Oh, I rest until six o'clock.

Robin. - ... and at six? What do you do at six?

Duchess. — I dress for dinner. We have dinner at eight o'clock.

Robin. — What time do you go to bed?

Duchess. — Well, I have a bath at nine thirty, and I go to bed at ten.

Robin. — Thank you, Duchess... you certainly have a busy and interesting life!

The thief, his mother, and $2 billion Stephane Breitweiser, 33, from Alsace, in France, is the greatest art thief in Europe. For six years, while he was working as a lorry driver, he stole 239 paintings from museums in France, Austria, and Denmark. He went into the museums just as they were closing and hid the paintings under his coat. Nobody looked at him because he was wearing a security guard's uniform. Back in his apartment, where he was living his with mother, he filled his bedroom with priceless works of art. His mother, Mireille, 53, thought all the paintings were copies. One day while they were having supper, the police arrived, and they took Stephene to the police station. Mireille was so angry with her son that she went to his room, took some paintings from the walls, and cut them into small pieces. Others she took and threw into the canal. Altogether she destroyed art worth two billion dollars! Both mother and son spent many years in prison.

Denmark is one of the most bicycle-friendly countries in the world. Roughly 40 percent of the people in its capital, Copenhagen, commute to school or work by bicycle. Why are bikes so popular in Denmark? the government is worried about pollution. Cars pollute the air, and the number of cars is growing, Denmark has a very high tax! On cars because the government wants more people to ride bikes instead. Another reason for the popularity of bicycles is that Denmark is a very flat country. The highest place in the country is only 557 feet (170 m), so it is a very easy place to ride a bike. In Copenhagen, there are also special lanes, just for cyclists. Cars must stop when a bike is crossing the road. Some places have special traffic lights to tell drivers that bikes are going to cross the road.

A: "Hey Mike. I forgot about registration. I'm a day late, so all the classes are mostly full. What do you think I should do?"

B: "You're screwed. You can't do anything about that. You have to hope that you get some classes that will be useful."

A: "Do you think going to the registration building will help at all?"

B: "No. They will tell you the same thing in a worse way."

A: "Did you register yet?"

B: "Of course. Registering for classes is not something you want to miss."

A: "What classes do you think are still open?"

B: "Well, I know psychology 101 is a big class, so there will always be seats in that class. You can also get into Sociology."

A: "That's helpful. Thanks. But what do you think about philosophy? I wanted to take that class this semester."

B: "I took that class last year. The professor is really cool, so if you go to his office, you can have him sign a card that will let you in even if the class is full."

A: "He does that?"

B: "I guess that's because so many people drop out of that class."

A: "That makes sense. I think I'll do that. Thanks for all the help."

B: "No problem man."

Chocolate

Chocolate was invented by Mayan and Aztec people hundreds of years ago. Those days, the people did not eat chocolate; the cocoa bean was used to make a chocolate drink. Later, the cocoa bean was brought to Europe.

In 1824, John Cadbury opened a small shop in Birmingham. One of the items he sold was cocoa powder to make into drinks. In 1831, he opened a small factory to make cocoa powder. Some time later Joseph Fry invented a way to make chocolate bars, and for the first time people started eating chocolate instead of drinking it. At first, only the rich people could afford it. Later, as more and more chocolate bars were produced and sold, it became cheaper.

Milk chocolate is made by adding milk or milk powder. Cadbury introduced their first milk chocolate bar in 1897. Their most famous chocolate, Cadbury's Milk Bar, introduced in 1905, has been a best seller in Britain and around the world for nearly 100 years.

WINSTON CHURCHILL

Winston Leonard Spencer Churchill was born at Blenheim Palace on St. Andrew's Day, 30 November 1874. His father, Lord Randolph Churchill, was a younger son of the Duke of Marlborough. His mother, Jennie Jerome, was the daughter of an American business tycoon.

Winston's childhood was privileged but not particularly happy. Like many Victorian parents, Lord and Lady Randolph Churchill were distant figures. Letters from his schooldays reveal a wilful and somewhat rebellious little boy.

In 1895 Churchill graduated from Sandhurst. He travelled to the United States and Cuba.

His adventures continued in 1899 when he sailed to South Africa as a correspondent of the Morning Post to cover the Boer War. He was captured and spent his twenty-fifth birthday as a prisoner of war, before escaping and making his way across the enemy lines to Durban.

Churchill was first elected to Parliament in 1900, shortly before the death of Queen Victoria.

In 1908 Churchill married Clementine Hozier, granddaughter of the 10th Earl of Airlie. They had five children, four of whom survived into adulthood. The marriage was long and happy, though there were quarrels.

DIANA'S NEW JOB

- Hey Diana, how is your new job going?
- Great. I love driving those tourists around. It's one of the best jobs I've ever had, Alan.
- Where did you take them today? Were you on the bus again?
- Yeah, we had them on bus and we took them to the canyon.
- Did you have time for lunch?
- We didn't have any time for lunch at all. The tourists had something to eat in the cafe near the canyon entrance but we had to organize the rest of the day with the staff at the park. We had a few minutes just to grab a sandwich later on.
- What time did you get back to the hotel? You look exhausted!
- We got back at five and then we had a little time with the leader of the tourist group discussing tomorrow's itinerary.
- Where are you going tomorrow?
- Oh, it's a much easier day tomorrow. We are taking them to the city museum in the morning and then to the aquarium after lunch. I don't think there will be too many problems.

Welcome to Wexford History Museum. I'd like to tell you a little about the museum before you start your visit. It was opened in 1923, and the building we're in was once an old school. During your visit you will learn all about the history of fishing. Some of the things in the museum are over three thousand years old.

Our guides will be happy to give you a tour. The twelve-fifteen tour has nearly finished, but there is a tour at one-fifteen, and another one at two-fifteen. They're every hour from eleven-fifteen until five-fifteen. It doesn't cost anything to look round the museum by yourself, and it's only two pounds each for the tour.

Now I am sure you will enjoy a visit to our shop, which sells lots of lovely things. For those of you who are on holiday in Wexford, you can buy postcards here. If you need any stamps or envelopes, the post-office is just next to the museum. Our shop also has books on many subjects-history, language, cooking, plants and animals - and there are maps as well. You will certainly find lots of ideas for presents. Enjoy your visit today.

CAMBRIDGE LANGUAGE SCHOOL

Right, can I have your attention, please? Good morning to you all. My name is David Hudson, the Director of Studies. I'm going to speak slowly and clearly so that you can all understand me, but if you don't, don't worry, as you can ask any questions when I've finished. First, I'd like to welcome all to the Cambridge Language school. We are very happy that you have chosen to study here with us, and we will do all we can to help you enjoy your time with us, and of course to help you learn as much English as possible. Now, all of you have met your host families. If any of you have got a problem with your family, please go and talk to the accommodation officer, Sharon Black, this afternoon. Her office is next to the reception area, on the left, and she will be there all afternoon from one o'clock till five o'clock. Now in a few moments, you're going to do a short written placement test which will start at 9.30 here in a main hall. This test is so that we can find out what your level of English is. Then there'll be a coffee break at half past ten, and after the break we'll tell you which class you are in and the name of your teacher. Your first class will start at eleven o'clock.

Lunch will be at 1.30 in the canteen, which is on the ground floor and then this afternoon, for those of you who want to go, there is an optional tour of Cambridge for all students, and you'll be visiting some of the university colleges. So if you want to go on the tour, please be outside the main gate of the school at 2.45 where your tour guide, Kevin, will be waiting for you. The tour will start at 3.00 on the dot, so don't be late. If anybody has any questions about anything, you can either ask me now or speak to your teacher. And if you have any questions during the course, my office is on the first floor and the door's always open. So, now it's time for your level test...

I have played football all my life and could happily sit here and type pages and pages about the reasons why it really is 'the beautiful game'.

I have lived in Vienna for 2 years now and through football have met some wonderful people and had some great times. The two main teams here are Rapid Vienna and Austria Vienna. The whole city seems to be divided between the two teams so when I meet new people here, they often ask me, 'are you green or purple?' This makes the games between the two teams, the Vienna Derbies, very special.

I have played lots with friends I have met in Vienna and I don't have a regular team yet but hope to change that in the next month! I also coach football here which is fantastic.

I have to do everything in German and getting to see how my time and effort makes children as young as 4-5 have a great time is the best part of the job. The parents are also always friendly and eager to see where my accent is from and what I'm doing in Vienna!

So, football, the thing I have been doing since I was 4 with my Dad is the thing that helps me get out and meet new people in a great world city. No matter what your hobby is, go out and do it!

The New Year's festival in China can be in January or February. Although it's only a four - day holiday, Chinese offices often closed down for nearly a month. Every year has the name of one of the twelve animals of the Chinese zodiac such as a cow a rabbit a monkey. 2006 was the year of the dog. People who were born in the year of the Dog are believed to be quiet, faithful and friendly. If you were born in a dog year then as soon as the new year begins you should wear a red belt around your waist for good luck. However, people in China do not believe in that superstition. "I wore belt in my year" says 32 - year old driver "and I had a lot of bad luck. I took it off". Mai-Tai remembers the New Year's celebrations when she was a girl in the 1950s. In the evenings parents and children used to go on visits to the houses of their relatives and friends. They held lightings to give them light in the dark streets. Everywhere food was waiting for them and they ate until they couldn't move. Relatives used to give the children money.

The Times, like Harvard University, is one of the country's most elite and exclusive institutions. That huge numbers of people at The Times, as at Harvard, buy into this institutional hubris makes the paper, where I spent 15 years, thankfully, as a foreign correspondent a few thousand miles from the newsroom — a fear-ridden and oppressive place to work.

The Times newsroom, like most corporate nerve centers, is a labyrinth of intrigue, gossip, back-biting, rumor, false piety, rampant ambition, betrayal and deception. Those who play this game well are repugnant. They are also usually the people who run the place.

You live in perpetual fear of what those in authority think of you and might do to you. This mechanism of internalized control — for you always need them more than they need you — is effective.

Careerists pay lip service to the stated ideals of the institution, which are couched in lofty rhetoric about balance, impartiality and neutrality, but astutely grasp the actual guiding principle of the paper, which is:

“Do not significantly alienate the corporate and political power elite on whom the institution depends for access and money.”

Change your bed sheets once a week, keep pans near the cooker, and never wash white clothes with dark ones.

That is just some of the advice you can find on a popular new internet site designed to help recently divorced Portuguese men do the housework which their wives always did for them when they were married.

According to a recent study, married men in Portugal do less work around the house than in any other European Union country. Thousands of men are having to iron their clothes and make dinner for the first time in their lives.

Many of these newly divorced men have turned to the website, called Vida-On, for advice on what for them were “women's worries”. On the website they can find out which bathroom cleaner works best or how to clean a stain from a white shirt.

It is not a secret that our meals influence much on our health and our mood. That's why I consider breakfast to be the most important meal in the day as it is the first our meal and it can put us in good spirits. Now I shall tell you about my breakfast

In the morning I usually have porridge. I often start my breakfast with a cereal which is not cooked, it is something dry, ready to be eaten or muesli - some grain or porridge which is not cooked with dried fruit, nuts and so on.

I also like eggs (cooked in different ways). I don't practically eat butter, I prefer soft margarine - made of vegetable fat, which is not heavy and creamy. I don't eat jam at breakfast, I eat marmalade which is not sweet, there is slight bitterness; it's rather pleasant.

I usually don't have substantial breakfast on weekdays, I do it on weekends when I get up late. Very often I have just tea or coffee with sandwiches. Tea is usually taken by me with milk. I like very strong tea without sugar.

Sometimes when I am in hurry, I don't have time to have proper breakfast and I go to the university being hungry. In such case I usually buy something like "Snickers" or "Mars" on my way to the Alma Mater.

A man named Randy liked to hunt trees. He looked for big trees and old trees. He made maps to show where these trees were. He did not want to cut them down. He wanted people to take care of them.

Randy was told of a very tall tree on Vancouver Island. The tree was said to be 314 feet tall. That would make it the tallest tree in Canada. Randy set out to find the tree.

But someone else found it first. It was found by a logger. Loggers wanted to cut down Canada's tallest tree and all the trees around it.

Randy made a path in the forest so people could see the tall tree. The tree was so big and beautiful it would fill them with awe. More and more people wanted to save that forest. Thanks to these people, that forest is now a park. Canada's tallest tree is still there.

There may still be a bigger tree out there. Maybe you will find it. But there are only a few old forests left in Canada. Many are still at risk of being cut down.

The Tower, called the Bloody Tower, has a very special connection with Anne Boleyn. Anne Boleyn was the second wife of Henry VIII - the king who had six wives. Henry divorced his first wife, Catherine, and he married Anne because he wanted a son. But Anne couldn't give him a son, only a daughter. Henry decided to marry again. But first Anne Boleyn had to die. It all happened very quickly. One day Anne was the Queen of England and the next day, on 2nd May 1536 she was arrested and brought here to the Bloody Tower. She was kept in this room for 18 days. She slept in that bed there. Then, on 19th May, she was taken from here and executed. Her head was cut off. But since then, the ghost of Anne Boleyn has been seen and heard many times in the Tower of London. Sometimes she sits in a dark corner of the room. She wears a long, grey dress, and a white hat. Sometimes she's seen with her head, sometimes without it, and sometimes she's carrying her head under her arm. Other people have seen the ghost of Anne Boleyn walking in the Bloody Tower.

It has taken a while for scientists to piece together the riddle of just when and where cats first became domesticated. One would think that the archaeological record might answer the question easily, but wild cats and domesticated cats have remarkably similar skeletons, complicating the matter. Some clues first came from the island of Cyprus in 1983, when archaeologists found a cat's jawbone dating back 8,000 years. Since it seemed highly unlikely that humans would have brought wild cats over to the island, the finding suggested that domestication occurred before 8,000 years ago.

In 2004, the unearthing of an even older site at Cyprus, in which a cat had been deliberately buried with a human, made it even more certain that the island's ancient cats were domesticated, and pushed the domestication date back at least another 1,500 years.

In 2007, a study published in the research journal Science secured more pieces in the cat - domestication puzzle based on genetic analyses. All domestic cats, the authors declared, descended from a Middle Eastern wildcat, Felis sylvestris, which literally means "cat of the woods." Cats were first domesticated in the Near East, and some of the study authors speculate that the process began up to 12,000 years ago.

The sun, the beach and the noisy fiesta were commodities exploited to attract tourists - in real life, Spaniards work longer hours than most Europeans, writes Carmen Moran. There's a tired, somewhat cliched feel to the idea the rest of Europe has about the Spaniards: a nation high on fiestas, with stunning women who can't go to the bullfight dressed in miniskirts lest their boyfriends and husbands (who are so macho) have a fit. And then there's the siestas in the afternoon, and the partying at night - an endless round of unchecked enjoyment.

The pictures Europeans have of Spain in their photo albums may be holiday snaps, but what happens there the rest of the time? The statistics tell us that there are Mondays, too. At 38.4 hours, the Spanish working week is longer than those in Finland (32.8), Germany (37.7), Italy (38) and France (35.6), to give a few examples taken from the EU agency Eurofound. And that's taking into account a more extensive calendar of national holidays in Spain than in any of those countries, as well as an older retirement age, in law (67) and in reality (62.3) - a year later than the European average. Comisiones Obreras, the biggest union, says: "Spain never was a nation of layabouts or lazy people, as it is made out to be. Just because we have holidays, that does not make us a country of idlers."

- She likes romantic things like candles, love stories, flowers.
- You should buy some beautiful flowers, some incense sticks and the latest book of love stories. She must be happy!
- Really? Simona promised me to help today. But she said that she is at the hospital.
- I know women very well! I'm going to help you.
- That's great! Thank you!

The sun, the beach and the noisy fiesta were commodities exploited to attract tourists - in real life, Spaniards work longer hours than most Europeans, writes Carmen Moran. There's a tired, somewhat cliched feel to the idea the rest of Europe has about the Spaniards: a nation high on fiestas, with stunning women who can't go to the bullfight dressed in miniskirts lest their boyfriends and husbands (who are so macho) have a fit. And then there's the siestas in the afternoon, and the partying at night - an endless round of unchecked enjoyment.

The pictures Europeans have of Spain in their photo albums may be holiday snaps, but what happens there the rest of the time? The statistics tell us that there are Mondays, too. At 38.4 hours, the Spanish working week is longer than those in Finland (32.8), Germany (37.7), Italy (38) and France (35.6), to give a few examples taken from the EU agency Eurofound. And that's taking into account a more extensive calendar of national holidays in Spain than in any of those countries, as well as an older retirement age, in law (67) and in reality (62.3) - a year later than the European average. Comisiones Obreras, the biggest union, says: "Spain never was a nation of layabouts or lazy people, as it is made out to be. Just because we have holidays, that does not make us a country of idlers."

A man named Randy liked to hunt trees. He looked for big trees and old trees. He made maps to show where these trees were. He did not want to cut them down. He wanted people to take care of them.

Randy was told of a very tall tree on Vancouver Island. The tree was said to be 314 feet tall. That would make it the tallest tree in Canada. Randy set out to find the tree.

But someone else found it first. It was found by a logger. Loggers wanted to cut down Canada's tallest tree and all the trees around it.

Randy made a path in the forest so people could see the tall tree. The tree was so big and beautiful it would fill them with awe. More and more people wanted to save that forest. Thanks to these people, that forest is now a park. Canada's tallest tree is still there.

There may still be a bigger tree out there. Maybe you will find it. But there are only a few old forests left in Canada. Many are still at risk of being cut down.

Change your bed sheets once a week, keep pans near the cooker, and never wash white clothes with dark ones.

That is just some of the advice you can find on a popular new internet site designed to help recently divorced Portuguese men do the housework which their wives always did for them when they were married.

According to a recent study, married men in Portugal do less work around the house than in any other European Union country. Thousands of men are having to iron their clothes and make dinner for the first time in their lives.

Many of these newly divorced men have turned to the website, called Vida-On, for advice on what for them were "women's worries". On the website they can find out which bathroom cleaner works best or how to clean a stain from a white shirt.

- Tell me about yourself.
- I grew up in Almaty and studied accounting. I worked at an accounting firm for two years and I enjoy cycling and reading.
- What are your strengths?
- I've always been a great team player. I'm good at keeping a team together and producing quality work in a team environment.
- What are your weaknesses?
- This might be bad, but in college I found that I procrastinated a lot. I realized this problem, and I'm working on it by finishing my work ahead of schedule.
- What are your short-term goals?
- My short-term goal is to find a position where I can use the knowledge and strengths that I have. I want to partake in the growth and success of the company I work for.
- Do you manage your time well?
- I know I manage my time well because I'm never late to work, and I've never missed a deadline.
- Ok. Good. I'll call you!
- Thank you!

It has taken a while for scientists to piece together the riddle of just when and where cats first became domesticated. One would think that the archaeological record might answer the question easily, but wild cats and domesticated cats have remarkably similar skeletons, complicating the matter. Some clues first came from the island of Cyprus in 1983, when archaeologists found a cat's jawbone dating back 8,000 years. Since it seemed highly unlikely that humans would have brought wild cats over to the island, the finding suggested that domestication occurred before 8,000 years ago.

In 2004, the unearthing of an even older site at Cyprus, in which a cat had been deliberately buried with a human, made it even more certain that the island's ancient cats were domesticated, and pushed the domestication date back at least another 1,500 years.

In 2007, a study published in the research journal Science secured more pieces in the cat - domestication puzzle based on genetic analyses. All domestic cats, the authors declared, descended from a Middle Eastern wildcat, Felis sylvestris, which literally means "cat of the woods." Cats were first domesticated in the Near East, and some of the study authors speculate that the process began up to 12,000 years ago.

I have played football all my life and could happily sit here and type pages and pages about the reasons why it really is 'the beautiful game'.

I have lived in Vienna for 2 years now and through football have met some wonderful people and had some great times. The two main teams here are Rapid Vienna and Austria Vienna. The whole city seems to be divided between the two teams so when I meet new people here, they often ask me, 'are you green or purple?' This makes the games between the two teams, the Vienna Derbies, very special.

I have played lots with friends I have met in Vienna and I don't have a regular team yet but hope to change that in the next month! I also coach football here which is fantastic.

I have to do everything in German and getting to see how my time and effort makes children as young as 4-5 have a great time is the best part of the job. The parents are also always friendly and eager to see where my accent is from and what I'm doing in Vienna!

So, football, the thing I have been doing since I was 4 with my Dad is the thing that helps me get out and meet new people in a great world city. No matter what your hobby is, go out and do it!

The New Year's festival in China can be in January or February. Although it's only a four - day holiday, Chinese offices often closed down for nearly a month. Every year has the name of one of the twelve animals of the Chinese zodiac such as a cow a rabbit a monkey. 2006 was the year of the dog. People who were born in the year of the Dog are believed to be quiet, faithful and friendly. If you were born in a dog year then as soon as the new year begins you should wear a red belt around your waist for good luck. However, people in China do not believe in that superstition. "I wore belt in my year" says 32 - year old driver "and I had a lot of bad luck. I took it off". Mai-Tai remembers the New Year's celebrations when she was a girl in the 1950s. In the evenings parents and children used to go on visits to the houses of their relatives and friends. They held lightings to give them light in the dark streets. Everywhere food was waiting for them and they ate until they couldn't move. Relatives used to give the children money.

The Tower, called the Bloody Tower, has a very special connection with Anne Boleyn. Anne Boleyn was the second wife of Henry VIII - the king who had six wives. Henry divorced his first wife, Catherine, and he married Anne because he wanted a son. But Anne couldn't give him a son, only a daughter. Henry decided to marry again. But first Anne Boleyn had to die. It all happened very quickly. One day Anne was the Queen of England and the next day, on 2nd May 1536 she was arrested and brought here to the Bloody Tower. She was kept in this room for 18 days. She slept in that bed there. Then, on 19th May, she was taken from here and executed. Her head was cut off. But since then, the ghost of Anne Boleyn has been seen and heard many times in the Tower of London. Sometimes she sits in a dark corner of the room. She wears a long, grey dress, and a white hat. Sometimes she's seen with her head, sometimes without it, and sometimes she's carrying her head under her arm. Other people have seen the ghost of Anne Boleyn walking in the Bloody Tower.
